

Developing Flowers

This is a small set of the flowers I grew in the last day of development before Daisy Garden was submitted to the second. Android Developer Challenge.

You can see how undecided I was about how to incorporate the Moseycode – whether to go for style or scannability. With only hours to go before the submission deadline, I played it safe and went for the highest contrast option.

Tom Gibara September 2009